

Project Faculty Position at Taiwan Tech

Taiwan Tech is offering two project faculty positions in department of mechanical engineering. The positions can be full professor, associate professor or assistant professor level. The project faculty members should conduct research in computational mechanics (computational fluid dynamics or solid mechanics), applications of artificial intelligence on smart manufacturing or big data for industry. The project faculty members should also give full English lectures in the international undergraduate program and also be an advisor of undergraduates. It is also required to implement administrative affairs for international students. The salary scale is as same as other tenure-track faculty members of Taiwan Tech. Regular evaluation will be required for these positions.

Applicants interested in the positions should hold a Ph.D. in mechanical engineering, aeronautic engineering, applied mechanics, or high performance computation area. In addition to salary, Taiwan Tech will provide a return flight ticket every year as well as NTD 6,000 per month for accommodation. The project faculty members are also eligible to apply a project from Ministry of Science and Technology, Ministry of Education and industry in Taiwan. The project faculty members are expected to arrive at Taiwan before Feb 1, 2019 and starts his/her job. On-line application is available at . Required documents are CV, degree certificate, academic transcript (for assistant professor only), research proposal, teaching plan, selected SCI journal publications (max. 5) and referees' contact information. The due date for the project faculty positions is by Nov. 30, 2018. International applicants are welcome. The contact e-mail address is meoffice@mail.ntust.edu.tw. All applicants should visit the website <https://goo.gl/gUAarV> to fill out required fields.